

Halo Live Wire Episode Eight Script

Juice: Hey guys welcome back to Halo live wire well we got a jam packed show for you today. So to start things off MadGex won't be joining us for the rest of the summer and I will have Renegade help me out when Gex is gone.

Nick: Well ya here we are at EP 8, by the way what ever happened to EP 007?

Juice: well gex was working on it and I hope he still is but he had a lot to do with it so I wont be out till he gets back. But lets move on.

Nick: well it looks like we have a game review for GRAW from Spartan1118.

Juice: well yes we do and he it goes. Ghost Recon Advanced Warfighter is a game the surpasses it's earlier predecessors in many ways. In this Ghost Recon (a.k.a GRAW) Tom Clancy takes you to the heart of the war currently going on in Mexico as the captain of an elite group called, the Ghosts. Loading times between missions? A thing of the past. In GRAW for the Xbox 360 you will ride an APC or Blackhawk helicopter from mission to mission as well as get briefed on board. You get to choose your squad who will fight along side you through the extensive, challenging campaign as you give them commands using the new Cross Comm system. With CC you will have a box in the top of your HUD that will allow you to give anyone and anything from APC's to Tanks to Squad members. Graphics and sound quality will blow you away (surround sound highly recommended, Hi-Def television not required to see amazing detail) and immerse you in an entirely new world of gameplay. Multiplayer is improved as well. The CC is carried over to give waypoints to your teammates and see what they see. Multiplayer is also given a large choice of weaponry from sniper rifles that can shoot through thin walls to machine guns to assault rifles. One of the best new features would have to be third person view that was not incorporated with other Ghost Recon games. Overall, GRAW is a game that is totally worthy of game of the year as Tom Clancy strikes again. Now all that's left is to ask, whats next? This has been a Sprtn production.

No I am not a random nublet.

Nick: wow that was some review thanks Spartan, but this is pretty old news but if you haven't heard of it yet when Sony was making the Ps3 controllers they made a slight spelling mistake well you know how on the ps2 controllers they have the start and select well they were going for the same concept on the ps3 but when it was shown to the press it had start and a serect buttons on them.

Also, Sony announced that games will be linked to your box, meaning you will not be able to rent games for the PS3. That also means that you will not be able to take a game over to a friends house and play because it will be linked. Why did Sony do this, we currently do not know but you will be the first to know straight from the Halo Live Wire news room.

Juice: wow two more reason not to buy a ps3. But I also have some cool info from Gamerscore Blog about the price drop in the Xbox 360.....

As you're all aware, there have been rumors of a price drop for the Xbox 360 coming along later this year. The official word from folks in the know is that there are currently no plans for a price drop this fall.

If you've been holding off picking one up because you think they'll be cheaper in the future, or they've been hard to find, or because you're too busy catching up on past episodes of Lost, wait no longer!

It's probably worth repeating that it takes a mere $299 (US) to join the next generation. You get hi-def game play, Xbox Live Silver for free, DVD movie playback, and MP3 player integration so you can listen on the awesome system you have hooked up to your home theater speakers. You can add a hard drive and wireless controllers when you have a few extra bucks. And with Xbox Live, you can be online and pwning your so-called gamer friends as soon as you hook up the system.

Think of all those long, lonely days between now and whenever that you could be playing Oblivion, GRAW, COD2, Fight Night 3, PGR3, and all those Xbox Live Arcade games everyone's raving about (with even more on the way), all in hi-def. And there are more great games coming in the weeks ahead, including LOTR BFME II, Chrome Hounds, Dead Rising, and Madden NFL 07. Besides that, think of all those gamerscore points you're not accumulating while you put off the purchase. You could hit 10,000 points before your friends pick up their Xbox 360!

Just think... this holiday as some people go broke because they're forced to buy movie technology with their game console, you'll be choosing from a 160 games, including Gears of War, Madden 07, Splinter Cell, Forza 2, and lots more. Oh and later on? How about Mass Effect, Halo 3, and Grand Theft Auto for starters.

Pick one up on the way home from work, and tell your S.O. that you got a killer deal that you just couldn't pass up. C'mon. You know you want to...

Nick: wow pretty sweet but I Paid the whole $400 for mine and it was worth it.

Juice: ya I hope it was worth it for all that money you pay. I'll probley get one sometime this summer or fall.

Nick: well cool. Now onto some Nintendo Wii news.

Juice: Yeah, well we all know about Nintendo's name change from the AWESOME name: Revolution to the not so great and by far kinda odd name if you know what I mean.

Nick: Yes, yes, any idea why they might have done that Juice?

Juice: Well, Nintendo said that it was to represent the fact that it will be a console for EVERYONE to play.

Nick: Ok, well in case any one was wondering, the Wii will cost around $200 and will have many features bundled such as built-in wireless and how about that controller?

Juice: Oh yeah, the controller. Well, for all of you that don't already know, the Wii controller is shaped like a remote that you might have for your television featuring motion sensors so if you move the controller you control the game.. The "Nunchuck" controller will plug into the bottom of the remote and be used as a thumbstick as an add on for any gamer.

Nick: Also, you will get a game update even if you Wii isn't turned on using the new Wii Connect-24 software.

Juice: That's pretty cool.

Nick: Absolutely.

Juice: Well that about wraps it up for this episode of Halo Live Wire, if you would like to submit something for the show, email it too shizniz23@gmail.com.

Nick: You can also call our listener voicemail at (206) 333-1918 and please try to keep it under two hours long please, we don't want our shows to get to lengthy.

Juice57: Also don't forget to check-out our website at test.halolivewire.com and thank you to Spartan1118 for writing the script for today's episode.
